Qatar dazzles as Middle East aviation picks up pace

By Andy Sambidge | May 8, 2024

A family boards an aeroplane. There are 213 airlines operating in the Middle East, says the OAG report.

- Increasing at twice global rate
- Qatar fastest-growing market
- Region had 87m tourists in 2023

The Middle East's aviation sector is growing at twice the global rate and is expected to offer 257 million passenger seats this year, according to a new report.

Not so long ago major airlines viewed the Middle East as a place to get cheap fuel on their way from Europe to South East Asia. Now it is one of the fastest-growing markets in the world.

Available seat kilometres – a key industry metric for passenger capacity – is growing by more than 9 percent a year on average in the region.

The report by aviation consultancy OAG says the UAE and Saudi Arabia are the region's biggest markets, accounting for 61 percent of total airline capacity, while Qatar is the fastest grower.

Since 2000 Qatar's aviation sector has expanded by 12.5 percent annually. It has grown from just over 3 million seats to more than 32 million seats expected this year.

VIDEO GIGA-PROJECTS

Saudi mega-project designs to merge tradition and futurism

By Andrew Hammond | March 27, 2024

Andrew Hammond talks about Saudi Arabia

- Local architecture must be respected
- Design commission advises on integration
- Giga-projects are not 'cookie-cutter exercise'

Saudi Arabia wants to ensure that the futurism of its giga-projects does not smother the diversity of its local architecture, according to the head of the government's Architecture and Design Commission.

One of the most striking features of the kingdom's transformation plan launched in 2016 has been its design – from otherworldly resorts planned for near-city Neom to a xast cube structure big enough to fit 20 Empire State Buildings at a new downtown district in Riyadh.

Preserving heritage and integrating local design into the projects – such as the Najdi style in the Riyadh region, Hijazi style in Jeddah or Aseeri style in Abha – has become an imperative, said Sumayah Al-Solaiman, CEO of the commission.

"There are sometimes instances where there is reverence for the vernacular and everything new and modern is shunned but that is not the case in Saudi Arabia at all," she said. "We embrace the new and innovative without losing who we are."

The commission – one of 11 overseen by the ministry of culture – has a remit to advise and guide the multitude of projects, which led one real estate consultancy to dub Saudi Arabia the biggest construction site in the world.

ANALYSIS OIL & GAS

Oil keeps Russia and China close, but analysts warn it won't last

By Eva Levesque | May 21, 2024

The presidents of China and Russia, Xi Jinping and Vladimir Putin, hold talks in Beijing last week

- Russia's crude is cheaper than Riyadh's
- Saudi sales to China set to drop again
- Likely to increase in long term, say experts

Russia was China's biggest oil supplier once again in April, according to official figures, staying ahead of Saudi Arabia thanks to its cheaper crude.

However, crude flows from Riyadh to Beijing are expected to increase as the kingdom strengthens its presence in the Chinese energy sector, analysts have told AGBI.

Russia's crude oil exports to China were up 30 percent year on year in April, according to data from Beijing's General Administration of Customs. Supplies from Saudi Arabia were down 25 percent over the same period.

Hi Sheikha @intisaral sabah believes that some of the developments around artificial intelligence are phenomenal, but technology is no substitute for the human touch especially when we put a talented, capable human into that position, it adds much better value. It provides that human interaction that people are now craving after the pandemic.
